

Transformation: From fossil fuels to the future

Dr. Edith Newton Wilson

Research Associate, University of Tulsa Department of Geosciences

30-year veteran of the oil patch

Founder, Owner, President and CEO of Rock Whisperer (www.rockwhispererllc.com)

For over a century and a half, geologists have used creativity and innovation to find and extract fossil fuels as a source of affordable energy for the developed world. What if we turned our collective talent to ensuring clean energy, potable water and food security for all? We, as earth scientists, can become an integral part of the transformation of our business from oil and gas production to implementation of renewable energy on a global scale.